In our desire to trust God and follow Jesus wherever he leads us, it's not a sin to feel troubled about it.

Yes, we do have to be willing to lose our lives (our own agendas, our own desires, our own ideas on what we should do with our time) so that we can unite ourselves to Christ and thus be embraced by his passionate love. However, we don't have to like doing it.

This Sunday's Gospel shows us that Jesus felt troubled by the sacrifices he would have to make. Yes, even Jesus himself felt troubled! And the Father glorified him.

Jesus came to earth to reveal God's ways and God's love and lead us to heaven. Now we, who are his followers, live in all parts of the earth, and we are called, commissioned, and prepared by the Sacraments to reveal God's ways and God's love to those around us, so that Jesus can lead them to heaven.

The Sacrament of Baptism initiates us into this calling. Confirmation commissions us to do it. Confession enables us to do it better by purifying us. Marriage and Holy Orders give us a venue for perfecting it. The Anointing of the Sick converts our illnesses into opportunities to bear witness to Christ's ministry. And the Eucharist unites us so fully to the Passion of Christ that we become what we are called to do.

This is our everyday ministry of evangelization: We love others as Jesus loves them, we do for them what Jesus wants to do for them, and we spread the good news about this as a continuation of the ministry of Jesus.

Often, this involves making difficult sacrifices and doing things that offend those who reject us, mock us, crucify us, or in any other way cause us to suffer. This is our unity with Christ, our Passion. We're not supposed to like it, but we are supposed to do it.

The Father honors us for this. Just like he glorified Jesus, he honors us with his compassion, his rewards, and his approval.

It's okay to feel troubled by the challenges we face in our mission. What keeps us going is knowing that God is raising us up. There is always resurrection after crucifixion.

Reflect & Discuss:

1. What troubles are you facing? Where is Jesus? Is he ahead of you, leading the way? Are you are following him?
2. How do you feel hearing Jesus admit, "I am troubled now"? Does it make you more aware of his humanness?
3. When you make sacrifices for others, how does this connect you more closely to the human heart of Jesus?
4. How is the Father honoring your own humanness as you walk daily in the mission of Jesus?
